set-up

vocalists in a traditional choir formation for "Evas voice", one of the speakers should be placed at a large distance from the choir, with sound gradually spreading to more speakers until the final five minutes speakers should be placed surrounding the audience

please ensure that the in-ear-monitors are audible to the singers only, and always remain inaudible to the audience

how to play the piece

Singers start by singing the Schäferhundlied (score attached), to the metronome click heard through the in-ear monitors. The starting tone is heard through the in-ear-monitors before the offset of the metronome. The metronome is set to 8/8 and counts half a bar in.

All five verses of the Schäferhundlied must be sung by heart. No scores on stage!

The metronome click gradually slows down. Other sounds than the metronome become audible through the in-ear-monitors. The singers imitate these sounds with as little delay as possible, and as precisely as possible, and quickly switch back to singing the Schäferhundlied when the other sounds are over. By the end of the fifth verse, the Schäferhundlied will have fallen apart, and only other sounds remain. The metronome click ends, and singers continue to imitate all sounds they hear through the monitors for the remaining part of the piece.

dog clickers

Apart from the metronome click, another click sound is audible through the in-ear-monitoring, as exemplified in track 10. This sound must not be imitated, but functions as the command for the usage of the dog clicker. Most dog clickers click twice per push (once for the push, once for the release). Singers must try to click only once per command. Push down the clicker and release the thumb when the next command is audible.

The clickers must be operated invisible to the audience, discreetly with one hand at waist height and the arm in a relaxed position. All singers must use the same clicker model.

performance

Singers can accompany the transformation from German choir-lady to wolves with performative changes in mimics, akin to Tourette-syndrome cramps. Strive for precision in movements if used.

rehearsals

Singers should listen to the all track simulation to get an impression of all combined tracks. Rehearse imitations well. Aim to be as precise as possible, both in timing and sound.

text

During the performance of the piece, the text from Eva's voice must be projected onto the stage, easily readable to the audience, with each sentence staying visible until the next sentence is audible. A "Nazi German" or Gothic font can be used. Do not project any other information during the piece, neither the text of the Schäferhundlied, nor title or authors. (Text attached).

words from Eva Braun's diary, written in 1935
to be projected during performances

I wish I had a dog.
I bought two lottery tickets.
I'll never get rich.
I can't do anything about that.

I had a birthday wish.
I bought myself some jewelry.
I'm infinitely happy happy.
I am mortally unhappy.

I only wish I were seriously ill.
I have to suffer so much.
I wish I had never seen him.
I am going to buy sleeping tablets.

I'll be half dazed.
I keep humming to myself.
I did my share of crying.
I want to sell everything.

I have sent him a letter.
I speak to him today.
I shouldn't have written.
I have decided on thirty-five pills.
